WHAT IS COMMUNICATIONS?

Equity in communications means that timely access to accurate information for marginalized communities is prioritized, and that messaging strategies come from trusted sources guided by culturally-relevant perspectives. The Communications Workgroup focuses on addressing systemic barriers to communication for underrepresented groups in the state of Utah through community mobilization and identifying preferred modes of information retrieval. The pandemic has aggravated many deep-seated disparities, and misinformation and delay has only created more barriers. This group will work to ensure marginalized communities are better informed to respond to, navigate, and recover from the current and future crises.

GOALS OF THE WORKGROUP

SHORT TERM GOALS

- Create short public service announcements and media campaigns that resonate with disproportionately affected communities to relay information through trusted sources.
- Collaborate to ensure that the state website (coronavirus.utah.gov) is providing culturally relevant and language-accessible information.
- Work with community based organizations in multiple sectors to share information and implement strategies to address systemic barriers.
- Generate guidelines about inclusive messaging for communities with legal fears (i.e. undocumented communities).
- Organize media outreach with subject matter experts to promote accurate information about resource opportunities through culturally-relevant channels.

LONG TERM GOALS

- Create and implement a communications triage system centered on community mobilization for state agencies to utilize preferred communication methods.
- Implement a formal communications plan (in tandem with a language access plan) for underrepresented communities in the face of crisis.
- Advocate for a public information officer to be included in all core crisis response teams who is qualified to address communication barriers with underrepresented communities.
GOALS CONTINUED

HOW WILL THESE GOALS ACHIEVE ACCESS?
These goals are intended to address systemic barriers to accurate and timely information to avoid further aggravate existing inequities. By working towards them, underrepresented and historically disenfranchised communities will be better informed to respond to, navigate, and recover from a crisis.

HOW WILL THESE GOALS BE ADOPTED BY TARGET ORGANIZATIONS OR STAKEHOLDERS?
Community-based organizations and stakeholders will be mobilized as trusted experts within target communities to relay pressing information, advocate for necessary change, and inform best communication strategies.

INCORPORATE IN STATEWIDE PLANS
The applications of these goals are rooted in working with and for organizations that serve historically marginalized communities. The workgroup encourages collaboration with statewide community partners looking to bridge communication divides.
